(U) Added Emphasis Being Placed on Reconnaissance

As a result of the high premium placed on photo reconnaissance of Cuba, the Air Force photo reconnaissance capability has been expanded.

On 30 January 1963, two newly configured RB-26 aircraft departed from Eglin Air Force Base to augment the reconnaissance capability in South Vietnam. The aircraft were equipped with 6" thru 36" focal length lenses for daylight reconnaissance and K-47 night photo cameras using flash bombs as the illuminate. Additionally, both aircraft were equipped with infrared sensing devices.

Since the reconnaissance capability was still not adequate, two RB-57A's were deployed to South Vietnam. These aircraft do not possess a night capability, but they are programmed to have infrared sensors installed. The 3" focal length panoramic cameras provided with these aircraft are providing a new low level operational capability. The photography from this type of camera provides exceptionally good resolution imagery from horizon to horizon.

Considerable effort has been expended to update our reconnaissance capability in South Vietnam and Southeast Asia. The results have been immediate and most productive.
Approximately 90 per cent of all air strikes generated in Vietnam have been a result of photo reconnaissance. In addition, the estimated Southeast Asia air order of battle has been confirmed in some instances, as a result of the covert aircraft activities.
Volume 1 Base Index Map and the Requirements/Target Index of the Collection Operations Facility Charts (COFC) were published, as were Collection Operations Folders.

Twelve Collection Operations Facility Folders (COFFs) were either partially or completely revised.

Map and overlay showing known and other significant known were prepared for (U) Requirements

(Unclassified) On 1 January 1963, the Air Force Intelligence Center (AFIC), Arlington Hall Station, Arlington, Virginia, was absorbed by DIA and became the DIA Production Center. Also, during this period, the PACOM Registry was established and became the channel, via DIA, for all requirements previously served on the component command by the service departments. These two transfers materially affected numerous Air Force collection requirements procedures. However, during this period, 217 Specific Intelligence Collection Requirements (SICRs) were forwarded to DIA for validation; 424 validated SICRs were served on Air Force collection elements; and 439 SICRs were cancelled. As of 30 June 1963, there were 566 SICRs outstanding on collectors.
Project FACE LIFT, which concerns use of non-programmed air facilities for recovery of SAC aircraft under emergency wartime conditions, was reviewed, and major changes were recommended to bring the requirements portion of this project in line with the DIA requirements program.

( Unclassified) All Air Force collectors and production elements were advised by letter, dated 28 May 1963, of current procedures for the initiation of intelligence collection requirements in response to Notices of Intelligence Potential (NIPs).

(U) New Attache Station

In February 1963, the Office of the Air Attache, Leopoldville, Republic of Congo, acquired a complete film library of aerial photography of the Congo taken by the Swedish SAAB 29 Jet Reconnaissance Unit in Leopoldville. The library contains 147 rolls of 9 x 9 and 70 mm negatives with a total of 5700 frames.
